Mr. John A. McCone

Dear John:

I have just returned from a three-week trip abroad, where I visited France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy. While there, I noticed in the Paris edition of the "Herald Tribune" an announcement of your appointment as Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, to succeed Allen Dulles.

It is difficult for me to express how thoroughly pleased I am that you have accepted this most difficult assignment, especially during these trying times. I have every confidence that there is no-one in the country better qualified to undertake this terribly important job. Your background of experience, and the respect you have earned over the years from the many people with whom you have been associated, represents a background that cannot be surpassed.

My best wishes to you for your continued good health and success in this assignment, which means so very much to our Nation, as a whole.

Sincerely,

15/ JETRAINER

Executive Vice President
